The newly designed 700 3G main blades and 105mm tail blades are catered specifically towards hard core 3D flying, increasing agility while maintaining stability, and increased rigidity to improve antitorsion characteristics, finished with a fresh new coat of graphic design. In addition, TREX700E PRO DFC includes numerous upgrades such as DFC rotor head system, new style swashplate antirotation guide, hardened main gear, new tail drive gear assembly, dual hinged tail control assembly, etc. The fiberglass canopy also took on a brand new look with new shape and new graphics, with even lower wind resistance, giving the TREX700E PRO DFC a refreshing feel. Brand new CCPM direct servo linkage design. The increased blade rigidity improves anti torsion characteristic during flight, and the new airfoil minimizes turbulence near the blade tip, reducing blade noise and power loss. There is no horizontal tail plane mounting provision on this clamp saving weight and further reducing aerodynamic drag.The material used in today systems as Align, and others is very thin, around 0.81mm. After seen a lot of clutches broken in the air, we came with aftermarket material. The main reason for those breaking clutches is the distance between the clutch and the material.

Example, the diameter of clutch metal is 53mm, and the liner installed is 54. 1mm is free space allow the clutch to expand. Every technical person knows that the material which clutch made from is spring metal which expand with turning, but it is very limited, and can expand to 0.30.5mm if more space exist, the clutch risk to break. So if you need to change the liner, use thicker material and do the following Measure the clutch and the clutch bell, lets assume the clutch is 53mm, and the bell is 56. If you put 1mm, it will be 54mm, so 1mm too much space risk to break. If you use 1.5mm, its better, however the clutch will be tight to insert, In this case prepare the liner, and put manually into the clutch bell, if the clutch doesn't go inside, please take it out and with the help of sandpaper 80120, sand little for all the length and do the fit again. You need to come to the point when the clutch will enter with a little force, and will show like it turns not easy.The result after you start the heli first time, the clutch will show difficulty to turn, but after 23 flight it will "find it way" and it will have perfect fit. And it will last for very long time.First, the order was placed at around 15h, received the. Mr. clement tavernier Great service, same day shipping.
